Gorgeous weatherboard home where memories were made and more to come

Some homes are so deeply cherished they're rarely seen on the market. This classic New Lambton weatherboard is one of them. Built in 1940 as a wedding gift, it's been lovingly passed down through four generations of the same family. From raising three boys to becoming a home for the great-grandson of its original owners, this house has been a constant source of love and memories. Now, it's ready to start a new chapter with you.

There's so much to adore here. The charm of its original period features including 10.5ft pressed metal ceilings, polished timber floors, and picture rails all setting a timeless tone, while the north-facing backyard floods the interiors with natural light and fresh air. The layout is beautifully simple, offering three generously sized bedrooms and a spacious lounge. Modern updates like a brand-new eat-in kitchen and a refurbished bathroom mean it's move-in ready, but if you've got bigger dreams, there's plenty of scope for further updates or even a rear or upper level extension (STCA).

Life on tightly held Blamey Avenue comes with more than just a beautiful home. It's a community where neighbours become friends, and kids play street games with their mates. The best part is how close everything is. Stroll around the corner to Orchardtown Road shops for your morning latte or a feed at the Blackbutt Hotel. It's just a five-minute drive, or brisk 15minute stroll to Westfield Kotara, an easy commute to John Hunter Hospital, plus, you can hit the city or the beaches in just over 10 minutes. Enjoy the great outdoors at nearby Richley Reserve or Novocastrian Park. This brilliant location offers convenience at your fingertips.
